CIVIL ACTION NO. 1:22-00193-N

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

Plaintiff Angel D. Fauver brought this action under 42 U.S.C. § 405(g) seeking judicial review of a final decision of the Defendant Commissioner of Social Security denying her application for a period of disability and disability insurance benefits (collectively, “DIB”) under Title II of the Social Security Act, 42 U.S.C. § 401, *et seq.*¹ Upon due consideration of the parties’ briefs (Docs. 22, 23, 25) and those portions of the certified transcript of the administrative record (Doc. 18) relevant to the issues raised, and with the benefit of oral argument, the Court finds that the Commissioner’s final decision is due to be AFFIRMED.²

¹ “Title II of the Social Security Act (Act), 49 Stat. 620, as amended, provides for the payment of insurance benefits to persons who have contributed to the program and who suffer from a physical or mental disability.” Bowen v. Yuckert, 482 U.S. 137, 140, 107 S. Ct. 2287, 96 L. Ed. 2d 119 (1987) (citing 42 U.S.C. § 423(a)(1)(D) (1982 ed., Supp. III)).

² With the consent of the parties, the Court has designated the undersigned Magistrate Judge to conduct all proceedings and order the entry of judgment in this civil action, in accordance with 28 U.S.C. § 636(c), Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 73, and S.D. Ala. GenLR 73. (See Docs. 20, 21).

I. Procedural Background

Fauver protectively filed the subject DIB application with the Social Security Administration (“SSA”) on July 30, 2020. After the application was denied initially, and again on reconsideration, Fauver requested, and on August 4, 2021, received, a hearing on her application with an Administrative Law Judge (“ALJ”) of the SSA’s Office of Hearings Operations. On August 19, 2021, the ALJ issued an unfavorable decision on Fauver’s application, finding her not entitled to benefits. (See Doc. 18, PageID.70-88).

The Commissioner’s decision on Fauver’s application became final when the Appeals Council for the SSA’s Office of Appellate Operations denied her request for review of the ALJ’s unfavorable decision on April 4, 2022. (See id., PageID.59-63). Fauver subsequently brought this action under § 405(g) for judicial review of the Commissioner’s final decision. See 42 U.S.C. § 405(g) (“Any individual, after any final decision of the Commissioner of Social Security made after a hearing to which he was a party, irrespective of the amount in controversy, may obtain a review of such decision by a civil action commenced within sixty days after the mailing to him of notice of such decision or within such further time as the Commissioner of Social Security may allow.”); Ingram v. Comm’r of Soc. Sec. Admin., 496 F.3d 1253, 1262 (11th Cir. 2007) (“The settled law of this Circuit is that a court may review, under sentence four of section 405(g), a denial of review by the Appeals Council.”).

II. Standards of Review

“In Social Security appeals, [the Court] must determine whether the Commissioner’s decision is supported by substantial evidence and based on proper legal standards.” Winschel v. Comm’r of Soc. Sec., 631 F.3d 1176, 1178 (11th Cir. 2011) (quotation omitted).

The phrase “substantial evidence” is a “term of art” used throughout administrative law to describe how courts are to review agency factfinding. T-Mobile South, LLC v. Roswell, 574 U.S. [293], [301], 135 S. Ct. 808, 815, 190 L. Ed. 2d 679 (2015). Under the substantial-evidence standard, a court looks to an existing administrative record and asks whether it contains “sufficien[t] evidence” to support the agency’s factual determinations. Consolidated Edison Co. v. NLRB, 305 U.S. 197, 229, 59 S. Ct. 206, 83 L. Ed. 126 (1938) (emphasis deleted). And whatever the meaning of “substantial” in other contexts, the threshold for such evidentiary sufficiency is not high. Substantial evidence ... is “more than a mere scintilla.” Ibid.; see, e.g., [Richardson v.] Perales, 402 U.S. [389,] 401, 91 S. Ct. 1420[, 28 L. Ed. 2d 842 (1971)] (internal quotation marks omitted). It means—and means only—“such relevant evidence as a reasonable mind might accept as adequate to support a conclusion.” Consolidated Edison, 305 U.S. at 229, 59 S. Ct. 206. See Dickinson v. Zurko, 527 U.S. 150, 153, 119 S. Ct. 1816, 144 L. Ed. 2d 143 (1999) (comparing the substantial-evidence standard to the deferential clearly-erroneous standard).

In reviewing the Commissioner’s factual findings, a court “ ‘may not decide the facts anew, reweigh the evidence, or substitute our judgment for that of the [Commissioner].’ ” Winschel, 631 F.3d at 1178 (quoting Phillips v. Barnhart, 357 F.3d 1232, 1240 n.8 (11th Cir. 2004) (alteration in original) (quoting Bloodsworth v. Heckler, 703 F.2d 1233, 1239 (11th Cir. 1983))). “ ‘Even if the evidence preponderates against the [Commissioner]’s factual findings, [the Court] must affirm if the decision reached is supported by substantial evidence.’ ” Ingram, 496 F.3d at 1260 (quoting Martin v. Sullivan, 894 F.2d 1520, 1529 (11th Cir. 1990)).

Put another way, “[u]nder the substantial evidence standard, we cannot look at the evidence presented to [an administrative agency] to determine if interpretations of the evidence other than that made by the [agency] are possible. Rather, we review the evidence that was presented to determine if the findings made by the [agency] were unreasonable. To that end, [judicial] inquiry is highly deferential and we consider only whether there is substantial evidence for the findings made by the [agency], not whether there is substantial evidence for some other finding that could have been, but was not, made. That is, even if the evidence could support multiple conclusions, we must affirm the agency’s decision unless there is no reasonable basis for that decision.” Adefemi v. Ashcroft, 386 F.3d 1022, 1029 (11th Cir. 2004) (en banc) (citations and quotation omitted).³

³ See also Barnes v. Sullivan, 932 F.2d 1356, 1358 (11th Cir. 1991) (per curiam) (“The court need not determine whether it would have reached a different result based upon the record” because “[e]ven if we find that the evidence preponderates against the [Commissioner]’s decision, we must affirm if the decision is supported by substantial evidence.”); Edwards v. Sullivan, 937 F.2d 580, 584 n.3 (11th Cir. 1991) (under the substantial evidence standard, “we do not reverse the [Commissioner] even if this court, sitting as a finder of fact, would have reached a contrary result...”); Hunter v. Soc. Sec. Admin., Comm’r, 808 F.3d 818, 822 (11th Cir. 2015) (“In light of our deferential review, there is no inconsistency in finding that two successive ALJ decisions are supported by substantial evidence even when those decisions reach opposing conclusions. Faced with the same record, different ALJs could disagree with one another based on their respective credibility determinations and how each weighs the evidence. Both decisions could nonetheless be supported by evidence that reasonable minds would accept as adequate.”); Barron v. Sullivan, 924 F.2d 227, 230 (11th Cir. 1991) (“Substantial evidence may even exist contrary to the findings of the ALJ, and we may have taken a different view of it as a factfinder. Yet, if there is substantially supportive evidence, the findings cannot be overturned.”); Edlund v. Massanari, 253 F.3d 1152, 1156 (9th Cir. 2001), as amended on reh’g (Aug. 9, 2001) (“If the evidence is susceptible to more than one rational interpretation, the court may not substitute its judgment for that of the Commissioner.”).

“Yet, within this narrowly circumscribed role, [courts] do not act as automatons. [A court] must scrutinize the record as a whole to determine if the decision reached is reasonable and supported by substantial evidence[.]” Bloodsworth, 703 F.2d at 1239 (citations and quotation omitted). See also Owens v. Heckler, 748 F.2d 1511, 1516 (11th Cir. 1984) (per curiam) (“We are neither to conduct a de novo proceeding, nor to rubber stamp the administrative decisions that come before us. Rather, our function is to ensure that the decision was based on a reasonable and consistently applied standard, and was carefully considered in light of all the relevant facts.”).⁴

The “substantial evidence” “standard of review applies only to findings of fact. No similar presumption of validity attaches to the [Commissioner]’s conclusions of law, including determination of the proper standards to be applied in reviewing claims.” *MacGregor v. As is plain from the statutory language, this deferential standard of review is applicable only to findings of fact made by the Secretary, and it is well established that no similar presumption of validity attaches to the Secretary’s conclusions of law, including determination of the proper standards to be applied in reviewing claims.” (some quotation marks omitted)). This Court “conduct[s] ‘an exacting examination’ of these factors.” Miles v. Chater, 84 F.3d 1397, 1400 (11th Cir. 1996) (per curiam) (quoting *Martin v. In sum, courts “review the Commissioner’s factual findings with deference and the Commissioner’s legal conclusions with close scrutiny.” Doughty v. Apfel, 245 F.3d 1274, 1278 (11th Cir. 2001). See also Moore v. Barnhart, 405 F.3d 1208, 1211 (11th Cir. 2005) (per curiam) (“In Social Security appeals, we review de novo the legal principles upon which the Commissioner’s decision is based. Chester v. Bowen, 792 F.2d 129, 131 (11th Cir. 1986). However, we review the resulting decision only to determine whether it is supported by substantial evidence. Crawford v. Comm’r of Soc. Sec., 363 F.3d 1155, 1158–59 (11th Cir. 2004).”). Moreover, an ALJ’s decision must “state with at least some measure of clarity the grounds for [the] decision.” Owens, 748 F.2d at 1516; Winschel, 631 F.3d at 1179. A court cannot “affirm simply because some rationale might have supported the [Commissioner]’ conclusion[,]” as “[s]uch an approach would not advance the ends of reasoned decision making.” Owens, 748 F.2d at 1516. Rather, “an agency’s order must be upheld, if at all, on the same basis articulated in the order by the agency itself.” Fed. Power Comm’n v. Texaco Inc., 417 U.S. 380, 397, 94 S. Ct. 2315, 41 L. Ed. 2d 141 (1974) (quotation omitted). *See also Newton v. Relevant here, eligibility for DIB requires a showing that a claimant is “under a disability[.]” 42 U.S.C. § 423(a)(1)(E), meaning that the claimant is unable “to engage in any substantial gainful activity by reason of a medically determinable physical or mental impairment ... which has lasted or can be expected to last for a continuous period of not less than 12 months.” 42 U.S.C. § 423(d)(1)(A).

The Social Security Regulations outline a five-step, sequential evaluation process used to determine whether a claimant is disabled: (1) whether the claimant is currently engaged in substantial gainful activity; (2) whether the claimant has a severe impairment or combination of impairments; (3) whether the impairment meets or equals the severity of the specified impairments in the Listing of Impairments; (4) based on a residual functional capacity (“RFC”) assessment, whether the claimant can perform any of his or her past relevant work despite the impairment; and (5) whether there are significant numbers of jobs in the national economy that the claimant can perform given the claimant's RFC, age, education, and work experience.

Winschel, 631 F.3d at 1178 (citing 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520(a)(4)(i)-(v), 416.920(a)(4)(i)-(v); Phillips, 357 F.3d at 1237-39).⁶

“These regulations place a very heavy burden on the claimant to demonstrate both a qualifying disability and an inability to perform past relevant work.” Moore, 405 F.3d at 1211 (citing Spencer v. Heckler, 765 F.2d 1090, 1093 (11th Cir. 1985)). “In determining whether the claimant has satisfied this initial burden, the printed in the Federal Appendix are cited as persuasive authority.”).

examiner must consider four factors: (1) objective medical facts or clinical findings; (2) the diagnoses of examining physicians; (3) evidence of pain; and (4) the claimant's age, education, and work history." Jones v. Bowen, 810 F.2d 1001, 1005 (11th Cir. 1986) (per curiam) (citing Tieniber v. Heckler, 720 F.2d 1251, 1253 (11th Cir. 1983) (per curiam)). "These factors must be considered both singly and in combination. Presence or absence of a single factor is not, in itself, conclusive." Bloodsworth, 703 F.2d at 1240 (citations omitted).

If, in Steps One through Four of the five-step evaluation, a claimant proves that he or she has a qualifying disability and cannot do his or her past relevant work, it then becomes the Commissioner's burden, at Step Five, to prove that the claimant is capable—given his or her age, education, and work history—of engaging in another kind of substantial gainful employment that exists in the national economy. Jones v. Apfel, 190 F.3d 1224, 1228 (11th Cir. 1999); Sryock v. Heckler, 764 F.2d 834, 836 (11th Cir. 1985). Finally, although the "claimant bears the burden of demonstrating the inability to return to [his or] her past relevant work, the Commissioner of Social Security has an obligation to develop a full and fair record." Shnorr v. Bowen, 816 F.2d 578, 581 (11th Cir. 1987). See also Ellison v. Barnhart, 355 F.3d 1272, 1276 (11th Cir. 2003) (per curiam) ("It is well-established that the ALJ has a basic duty to develop a full and fair record. Nevertheless, the claimant bears the burden of proving that he is disabled, and, consequently, he is responsible for producing evidence in support of his claim." (citations omitted)). "This is an onerous task, as the ALJ must scrupulously and conscientiously probe into, inquire of, and explore for all relevant facts. In determining whether a claimant is disabled, the ALJ must consider the evidence as a whole.” Henry v. Comm’r of Soc. Sec., 802 F.3d 1264, 1267 (11th Cir. 2015) (per curiam) (citation and quotation omitted).

If a court determines that the Commissioner reached a decision “by focusing upon one aspect of the evidence and ignoring other parts of the record[, i]n such circumstances [the court] cannot properly find that the administrative decision is supported by substantial evidence. It is not enough to discover a piece of evidence which supports that decision, but to disregard other contrary evidence.” McCruter v. Bowen, 791 F.2d 1544, 1548 (11th Cir. 1986). Nevertheless, “ ‘there is no rigid requirement that the ALJ specifically refer to every piece of evidence in his decision, so long as the ALJ’s decision ... is not a broad rejection which is not enough to enable [a reviewing court] to conclude that the ALJ considered [the claimant’s] medical condition as a whole.’ ” Mitchell v. Comm’r, Soc. Sec. Admin., 771 F.3d 780, 782 (11th Cir. 2014) (quoting Dyer v. Barnhart, 395 F.3d 1206, 1211 (11th Cir. 2005) (per curiam) (quotation and brackets omitted)).

When the ALJ denies benefits and the Appeals Council denies review of that decision, a court “review[s] the ALJ’s decision as the Commissioner’s final decision[.]” Doughty, 245 F.3d at 1278, and the Court “will look only to the evidence actually presented to the ALJ in determining whether the ALJ’s decision is supported by substantial evidence.” Falge v. Apfel, 150 F.3d 1320, 1323 (11th Cir. 1998). But “when a claimant properly presents new evidence to the Appeals Council, a reviewing court must consider whether that new evidence renders the denial of benefits erroneous.” Ingram, 496 F.3d at 1262.

III. Summary of the ALJ's Decision

At Step One, the ALJ found that Fauver met the applicable insured status requirements through December 31, 2025, and that she had not engaged in substantial gainful activity since the alleged disability onset date of April 1, 2020.⁷ (Doc. 18, PageID.75). At Step Two, the ALJ found that Fauver had the following severe impairments: obesity, diabetes mellitus (type 2), hypothyroidism, left ear deafness, right ear sensorineural hearing loss, lumbar degenerative disc disease, and Achilles tendinosis (with Haglund's deformity).⁸ (Doc. 18, PageID.75-77). At Step Three,⁹ the ALJ found that Fauver did not have an impairment or combination of impairments that met or equaled the severity of a specified impairment in Appendix 1 of the Listing of Impairments, 20 C.F.R. § 404, Subpt. P, App. 1. (Doc. 18, PageID.77-79).

At Step Four,¹⁰ the ALJ determined that Fauver had the residual functional 525, 110 S. Ct. 885, 107 L. Ed. 2d 967 (1990) (“In the third step, the medical evidence of the claimant's impairment is compared to a list of impairments presumed severe enough to preclude any gainful work ... If the claimant's impairment matches or is ‘equal’ to one of the listed impairments, he qualifies for benefits without further inquiry.”); Crayton v. Callahan, 120 F.3d 1217, 1219 (11th Cir. 1997) (“If the claimant’s condition meets or equals the level of severity of a listed impairment, the claimant at this point is conclusively presumed to be disabled based on his or her medical condition.”).

¹⁰ At Step Four,

the ALJ must assess: (1) the claimant's residual functional capacity (“RFC”); and (2) the claimant's ability to return to her past relevant work. 20 C.F.R. § 404.1520(a)(4)(iv). As for the claimant's RFC, the regulations define RFC as that which an individual is still able to do despite the limitations caused by his or her impairments. 20 C.F.R. § 404.1545(a). Moreover, the ALJ will “assess and make a finding about [the claimant's] residual functional capacity based on all the relevant medical and other evidence” in the case. 20 C.F.R. § 404.1520(e). Furthermore, the RFC determination is used both to determine whether the claimant: (1) can return to her past relevant work under the fourth step; and (2) can adjust to other work under the fifth step...20 C.F.R. § 404.1520(e).

If the claimant can return to her past relevant work, the ALJ will conclude that the claimant is not disabled. 20 C.F.R. § 404.1520(a)(4)(iv) & (f). If the claimant cannot return to her past relevant work, the ALJ moves on to step five.

In determining whether [a claimant] can return to her past relevant work, the ALJ must determine the claimant's RFC using all relevant medical and other evidence in the case. 20 C.F.R. § 404.1520(e). That is, the ALJ must determine if the claimant is limited to a particular work level. See 20 C.F.R. § 404.1567. Once the ALJ assesses the claimant’s RFC and determines that the claimant cannot return to her capacity (RFC) “to perform light work as defined in 20 CFR 404.1567(b)^[11] except that [she] can only frequently reach and only occasionally climb, stoop, crouch, kneel, and/or crawl[;] can only frequently balance and cannot make use of any foot controls[;] is unable to hear in one ear and can only occasionally hear with the other ear[;] cannot work exposed to dangerous machinery or to heights[; and] cannot drive any automotive equipment.” (Doc. 18, PageID.79-82). Based on the RFC, the ALJ found that Fauver was unable to perform any past relevant work. (Id., PageID.82-83).

prior relevant work, the ALJ moves on to the fifth, and final, step.

Phillips, 357 F.3d at 1238-39 (footnote omitted). “[A]n ALJ’s RFC assessment is an administrative finding based on all the relevant evidence, including both medical and nonmedical evidence.” Pupo v. Comm’r, Soc. Sec. Admin., 17 F.4th 1054, 1065 (11th Cir. 2021).

¹¹ “To determine the physical exertion requirements of different types of employment in the national economy, the Commissioner classifies jobs as sedentary, light, medium, heavy, and very heavy. These terms are all defined in the regulations ... Each classification ... has its own set of criteria.” Phillips, 357 F.3d at 1239 n.4. The criteria for “light” work are as follows:

Light work involves lifting no more than 20 pounds at a time with frequent lifting or carrying of objects weighing up to 10 pounds. Even though the weight lifted may be very little, a job is in this category when it requires a good deal of walking or standing, or when it involves sitting most of the time with some pushing and pulling of arm or leg controls. To be considered capable of performing a full or wide range of light work, you must have the ability to do substantially all of these activities. If someone can do light work, we determine that he or she can also do sedentary work, unless there are additional limiting factors such as loss of fine dexterity or inability to sit for long periods of time.

However, at Step Five, after considering the testimony of a vocational expert,¹² the ALJ found that there exist a significant number of jobs in the national economy as a data entry clerk (390,000 positions nationwide), billing clerk (320,000 positions nationwide, and check writer (70,000 positions nationwide) that Fauver could perform given her RFC, age, education, and work experience. (Doc. 18, PageID.83-84). Thus, the ALJ found that Fauver was not “under a disability” under the Social Security Act. (Id., PageID.84).

IV. Analysis

Fauver claims that the ALJ reversibly erred by not including any limitations in her ability to communicate in a work setting in the RFC, despite finding that she was deaf in one ear and could only occasionally hear with the other. Relatedly, Fauver argues the ALJ’s hypothetical question to the vocational expert was “not sufficiently clear” because it did “not contain any limitations related to [her] ability to verbally communicate with supervisors, co-workers, or the public.” (Doc. 22, PageID.403). No reversible error has been shown.

As Fauver notes, guidance from the Commissioner states: “As with exertional capacity, nonexertional capacity^[13] must be expressed in terms of work-related ¹² “A vocational expert is an expert on the kinds of jobs an individual can perform based on his or her capacity and impairments. When the ALJ uses a vocational expert, the ALJ will pose hypothetical question(s) to the vocational expert to establish whether someone with the limitations that the ALJ has previously determined that the claimant has will be able to secure employment in the national economy.” Phillips, 357 F.3d at 1240.

functions...In assessing RFC with impairments affecting hearing or speech, the adjudicator must explain how the individual's limitations would affect his or her ability to communicate in the workplace.” Social Security Ruling (SSR) 96-8p, 1996 WL 374184, at *6 (July 2, 1996).¹⁴

At Step Two, the ALJ found that Fauver had no limitation in the functional areas of understanding, remembering or applying information; interacting with others; concentrating, persisting or maintaining pace, and adapting or managing oneself. (See Doc. 18, PageID.76-77). The ALJ based this finding on the medical opinion of state agency reviewing psychiatrist Peter Sims, M.D., and the general “lack of evidence of [Fauver] having more than a minimal limitation in psychological functioning for more than 12 months.” (See id.) These four functional and restrictions that are not reflected in the seven strength demands, and mental limitations and restrictions. It assesses an individual's abilities to perform physical activities such as postural (e.g., stooping, climbing), manipulative (e.g., reaching, handling), visual (seeing), communicative (hearing, speaking), and mental (e.g., understanding and remembering instructions and responding appropriately to supervision). In addition to these activities, it also considers the ability to tolerate various environmental factors (e.g., tolerance of temperature extremes).” SSR 96-8p, 1996 WL 374184, at *6.

areas are very similar to the “[w]ork-related mental activities” that the Commissioner has explained might be affected by hearing loss and other communicative impairments. See SSR 96-8p, 1996 WL 374184, at *6 (“Work-related mental activities generally required by competitive, remunerative work include the abilities to: understand, carry out, and remember instructions; use judgment in making work-related decisions; respond appropriately to supervision, co-workers and work situations; and deal with changes in a routine work setting.”). Fauver does not challenge those findings.¹⁵

Moreover, at Step Four, the ALJ discussed the evidence regarding Fauver’s hearing impairments as follows:

The claimant complained of increasing right-sided hearing loss in late 07/2020, indicating that the claimant’s hearing in the right ear, although diminished, had previously been stable until a week earlier. (Exhibit 2F). The claimant also indicated at that time that the claimant had been experiencing total deafness in the left ear for the previous 4 years. The claimant indicated that the claimant’s right ear hearing was very troublesome, with voices sounding to the claimant like static and echoes. Dr. Elliott indicated that the claimant’s right-sided hearing loss still allows for “a discrimination of 68%.” (Exhibit 4F). However, in 11/2020, when the claimant presented for more treatment, it was noted that the claimant “reports no difficulty hearing and no ear pain.” (Exhibit 3F). No problem with hearing was noted among the litany of diagnoses at that time, either. Accordingly, in light of this conflicting evidence of some but by no means total hearing loss (and right-sided hearing loss of uncertain duration/persistence), the environmental and hearing limitations in the residual functional capacity are warranted.

¹⁵ While, as the ALJ acknowledged, “the [Psychiatric Review Technique at Steps Two and Three] and RFC evaluations are undeniably distinct, nothing precludes the ALJ from considering the results of the former in his determination of the latter.” Winschel, 631 F.3d at 1180.

(Doc. 18, PageID.81).

And in his hypothetical to the vocational expert, the ALJ asked the expert to assume, in relevant part, an individual whose “hearing in one hear [sic] would be totally precluded, and the hearing in the other ear would be seriously limited to the extent that she could have no expose to dangerous machinery; dangerous heights; or the driving of automotive equipment; and so...assume that at best she would be able to have one ear that would permit occasional hearing in the workplace...” (Id., PageID.100).¹⁶ Thus, the ALJ made reasonably clear that, given the “conflicting evidence” regarding the severity of Fauver’s hearing impairments, the ALJ determined that her hearing impairments would limit her ability to drive and work around machinery and heights, but would not otherwise impact her ability to perform work. Fauver does not meaningfully challenge the ALJ’s view of the ¹⁶ The phrase “occasional hearing in the workplace,” when read in its full context, is reasonably understood as encompassing the specific limitations preceding it in the hypothetical, and is not as “vocationally” ambiguous as Fauver would have the Court believe (see Doc. 22, PageID.403). As the Commissioner correctly points out, the vocational expert did not voice any difficulty understanding the ALJ’s hypothetical.

Moreover, and notwithstanding the determination that the ALJ correctly found no additional communicative limitations, the undersigned is not persuaded by Fauver’s suggestion that “occasional” (i.e., one-third of the workday) “hearing in the workplace” translates into “an ability to understand only approximately 60% of any interaction with co-workers, supervisors, or the public[,]” which the vocational expert stated “could be a problem” in response to a hypothetical question by Fauver’s representative. (See Doc. 18, PageID.103-104). Rather than indicating that Fauver could only ever hear approximately one-third of things said to her, the undersigned finds that it is more reasonably understood to mean that hearing things, such as instructions from supervisors, would only be required up to one-third of an average workday. And regardless, Fauver has cited no authority supporting her extreme position that every limitation in an ALJ’s hypothetical must be subject to only “one, indisputably clear interpretation...” (Doc. 25, PageID.419).

evidence, or cite to record evidence of her own suggesting substantial difficulty in verbally communicating with others. Rather, she simply asks the Court to assume such difficulty based solely on the fact she has hearing impairments; “[h]owever, the mere existence of these impairments does not reveal the extent to which they limit her ability to work or undermine the ALJ’s determination in that regard.” Moore, 406 F.3d at 1213 n.6. notwithstanding See also McCruter, 791 F.2d at 1547 (“the ‘severity’ of a medically ascertained disability must be measured in terms of its effect upon ability to work, and not simply in terms of deviation from purely medical standards of bodily perfection or normality”). Thus, substantial evidence supports the ALJ decision not to include any additional communicative limitations in the RFC, and “the ALJ was not required to include findings in the hypothetical that the ALJ had properly rejected as unsupported.” Crawford, 363 F.3d at 1161.¹⁷

¹⁷ In considering the opinion evidence of record, the ALJ stated: “The opinion of the Vocational Expert with respect to occupations that can be done by one with hearing limitations was particularly persuasive since that expert was, for many years, the Research Director for the Alabama Institute for Deaf and Blind.” (Doc. 18, PageID.82). Fauver “objects to giving the VE’s testimony special weight because of his prior work with the Alabama Institute for the Deaf and Blind[,]” arguing: “The AIDB serves as a comprehensive education, rehabilitation, and service program for individuals of all ages. It is notable in this case that Plaintiff had a significant change in her hearing in 2020 (see PageID.362) and has not participated in any specialized rehabilitation program to assist in obtaining or learning a new job at her current level of hearing loss.” (Doc. 22, PageID.404). The undersigned finds no error in the ALJ’s consideration of the vocational expert’s prior experience, especially as there is no indication that this was a controlling factor. Cf. Biestek, 139 S. Ct. at 1156 (explaining that the testimony of a vocational expert with “top-of-the-line credentials, including professional qualifications and many years’ experience[,]” who explains how she arrived at her conclusions and “answers cogently and thoroughly all questions put to her by the ALJ and the applicant’s lawyer[,]” can still constitute substantial evidence supporting a “finding about job availability” even if objective data underlying that testimony is not produced). Fauver has not explained how the

No reversible error having been shown, the Court finds that the Commissioner's final decision denying Fauver's application for benefits is therefore due to be AFFIRMED.

V. Conclusion

In accordance with the foregoing analysis, the Commissioner's final decision denying Fauver's July 30, 2020 DIB application is AFFIRMED under sentence four of 42 U.S.C. § 405(g).

Judgment in accordance with this order shall hereafter be set out by separate document, in accordance with Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 58.

vocational expert's testimony was inconsistent with the Dictionary of Occupational Titles, contrary to the ALJ's express finding that it was. (See Doc. 18, PageID.84). Moreover, there is no indication in the vocational expert's testimony that his conclusions were based on any assumption that Fauver possessed specialized training or adaptations to account for her hearing loss.
